

I am quite disturbed that the FCC is going ahead with action on ownership rules without first revealing their plans. The current rules for television provide a good system to keep the greedy from too much control over the information the public receives. Lets not bring newspapers and television down to the level of radio. This is where we need to draw a line in the sand. If the FCC cares for the public, and not big money, there should be no question as to what action should be taken on June 2. Leave the crossownership rules the way they are now, and start to take action to reverse what has been done to radio. Only then will we be able to save our over the air and print media!
